WIN LOADS OF HORNBY® GOODIES FOR CHRISTMAS

ED WANTS TO REGAIN OUR TRUST

LABOUR Party leader Ed Miliband has admitted there are "no easy answers" to regaining the faith lost by Medway voters.

Speaking exclusively to Archant KOS Media, the new Leader of the Opposition acknowledged the party's dismal record across the county and said he would talk to local people in an attempt to regain their trust.

Labour lost all seven of its MPs in Kent at the last General Election and is represented by just two members on Kent County Council. Furthermore, not one of the 13 district councils in the county is under Labour control.

"I think that here, as in other places across the country, people have lost the sense that we would help make their lives better," said Mr Miliband.

"Tackling immigration is an example of a key issue among Kent voters but there are others which they may see as more important, such as are their children going to get a job and how are we going to help them get on?

"They gave us the benefit of the doubt for a while when we were in Government, but in the end they lost faith.

"There are no shortcuts or easy answers; we've got to go out and talk to people. That's the process we've embarked on because I think many in Kent felt we had lost our way."

THE CROWN JOOLS

Boogie woogie star Jools Holland has declared his love for two things - the Queen and the county he now calls home.

The TV presenter and pianist - who lives in Cooling Castle, Rochester - said: "The Lord Lieutenant of Kent, who serves the Queen, asked and I didn't hesitate. I love the Queen. I've had a crush on her since I was eight. And I love Kent."

Holland, who fronts the popular Later... show, has served as the Deputy Lieutenant of Kent since 2006.

He told a national newspaper of his duties as an officer of the county. "Should the French or the Spanish decide to invade, I'll be helping to light the beacons to warn of the danger."

Commuters to have an unhappy New Year as rail fares to be hiked

■ BY DAN COLOMBINI

TRAIN passengers are facing an expensive New Year with rail fares set to rise by nearly ten per cent.

Latest figures from the Association of Train Operating Companies show that prices for regulated fares in Medway will soar at the beginning of 2011.

Prices across Kent will go up on average by 7.8 per cent from January.

The increases are higher than the national average rise, due to the four-year RPI plus three agreement between the Government and Southeastern that is up for renewal in 2012.

The contract allows the rail company to increase fares by three per cent above the rate of inflation, two per cent higher than other train firms.

Charles Horton, managing director of Southeastern, believes the increases made in Kent will remove the financial burden from the tax payer and focus it on the passengers instead.

He said: "Nobody likes to see prices rise, but it is the stated policy of the government to move more of the cost of travelling by train towards passengers and away from the general taxpayer," he said.

"There are only two sources of funding for railway journeys: taxpayer subsidy and passengers' fares. The amount of taxpayer subsidy we receive from the government reduces year-on-year and to offset this we need to raise the fares to make up the difference and to minimise the burden on taxpayers."

With the agreement coming to an end in 2012, Rochester and Strood MP, Mark Reckless believes com-

COST: Prices are to rise by 7.8 per cent

muters should now expect an improved service on their travels to and from the South East.

He said: "I believe Kent was not given a fair deal by the last government, which agreed a contract with Southeastern providing for our fares to rise faster than elsewhere."

"This will stop after January and Southeastern will henceforth be treated the same as the rest of the country. I hope that Southeastern, having been given four years of higher fares than other providers, will now improve their service to passengers."

Performance

His thoughts are shared by rail watchdog Passenger Focus manager for Kent, Tunde Olatunji who said: "This level of price rises puts the spotlight on Southeastern's performance and value for money, for such prices passengers will rightfully expect punctual, clean trains with a reasonable chance of getting a seat."

With the increase in place from January, passengers on popular routes, such as Ashford and Ramsgate, will now have to fork out up to £500 extra for a ticket to London, and almost £600 more on high-speed lines.

Police search for man who grabbed women

POLICE have released this e-fit of a man wanted in connection with assaults on women.

A man attempted to grab a 19-year-old in Rochester Street, Chatham, at 8pm on Thursday, November 4. She was able to push her attacker away and ran to a shop.

A 16-year-old girl was then targeted in nearby Dale Street between 4.15pm and 4.40pm on Tuesday, November 9. A man attempted to grab the schoolgirl but ran away when she shouted at him.

The attacker is white or Asian, between 5ft6in and 5ft9in, aged 18-25 and clean shaven. He wore silver rimmed square glasses.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Kent Police on 01634 792658, or CrimeStoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Dropped cigarette leads to large fine

A LITTERBUG has been ordered to pay £340 after dropping a cigarette butt in Chatham town centre.

Medway Council's community officers saw Andrew Baker, 31 of Luton Road, Chatham, drop the butt in Military Road on February 25.

He was given an £80 fixed penalty notice but failed to settle the fine.

The litterbug was summonsed to appear before Medway Magistrates Court on Monday, November 22, but failed to appear.

Baker was fined £175 and ordered to pay £150 in costs and a £15 victim surcharge.

To report litter, flytipping or other environmental issue affecting your neighbourhood call 01634 333333 or email customer.first@medway.gov.uk.

Primary schools to be given makeovers

SEVEN crumbling primary schools will be rebuilt and refurbished, it has been announced.

All Faiths', Lordswood, Napier, Oaklands, Thamesview, Twydall and Walderslade primary schools will all undergo improvement works.

The much-needed makeovers - costing a total of £14.9 million - will be paid for out of Medway Council's Primary Capital Programme budget.

Further works will be carried out on other schools once the council's capital allocations for future years are confirmed.

Illegal waste costs builder £835

A BUILDER has been handed a £500 flytipping fine after waste dumped in a Rainham field were traced to him.

Wood and other building materials found on land bordering Meresborough Road in March this year were linked to Michael King, of Petts Wood, Orpington.

The 46-year-old told Medway Council's environmental enforcement officers that he had paid an unknown man £120 to take it away from a job he had carried out in Hammersmith, London.

King admitted he should have checked the man's waste carrier's licence and insisted on a transfer note.

He went before Medway Mag-

ILLEGAL: The fly-tipped rubbish

istrates Court on Wednesday, November 24, where he pleaded guilty to illegally disposing of controlled waste.

Magistrates ordered the builder to pay a £500 fine, £200 costs and a £15 victim surcharge.

Medway Council's enforcement boss Mike O'Brien said: "This highlights the need for people to make the proper checks when disposing of their waste. We all have a duty of care to make sure that anyone taking our rubbish away is licensed to do so."

"The unscrupulous will take your money and fly-tip your waste. If you can't prove who you give your waste to you are liable to be prosecuted with a fine, including the money paid out in the first place."

"King should have known better given he had been a licensed waste carrier. By not making the proper checks he is £835 out of pocket and now has a criminal conviction."

Miliband vows to fight for 'squeezed middle'

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

LABOUR leader Ed Miliband was grilled by our readers during a day-long visit to Medway.

The party leader faced questions on topics from across the political spectrum, ranging from the recent student protests to the country's membership of the European Union.

The hour-long Q and A session was held at MidKent College's Gillingham campus on Saturday afternoon.

Earlier that day, Mr Miliband had given a speech at Labour's National Policy Forum meeting, at Gillingham's Priestfield Stadium.

He spoke of the need to take the 'Big Society' back from the Conservatives, to become the 'people's party' again, and reiterated his desire to target the 'squeezed middle'.

However, Mr Miliband told Yourmedway that did not mean he would be ignoring the needs of low-paid people, like many who live in Gillingham – one of the most deprived towns in the country.

"There are many low-paid workers who at the last general election wondered what was in it for them, and did not vote," he said.

"We want to make a difference to their lives as well as the lives of middle-class families.

"The Conservatives tend to think about the very poor in society and then everyone else, whereas we recognise that many people on a middle income are still struggling to get by.

"It's those people we want to speak up for."

REASSURANCES: Labour leader Ed Miliband addresses Yourmedway readers in an hour-long session

When asked after the Q and A session why Kent voters should care about his responses, given Labour's current standing as the outsiders of UK politics, Mr Miliband said it was more about gauging opinions than revealing new policies at this stage.

He added that the main thing he had taken from the afternoon was that people want a government with a real plan for the country.

"We've got to have an economic policy that goes beyond reducing the deficit," he said.

"How are we going to create new jobs and get people on better wages? These are the types of things we need to address.

"I want us to win as many seats in Kent as possible at the next election, and I'm confident we will start to regain a foothold with the local council elections next May.

"The Conservatives have no plans to replace the jobs that are currently being lost, and that's very bad for social justice. These are hard decisions that are really going to hit people hard."

But there are no shortcuts in Ed's Labour revival

MR Miliband told party members in Medway that "the fightback has begun".

He addressed hundreds of Labour members at Gillingham's Priestfield stadium.

Having been introduced to the stage by Shadow Welsh Secretary Peter Hain, to rapturous applause from the 200-strong crowd, the Labour leader said his new-look party was gaining momentum.

"We are a party that people are coming to, not moving away from," he said. "We have gained 43,000 new members since the general election, and have been winning by-elections up and down the country.

"This is a party where the fightback has begun."

Mr Miliband remained in centre stage for the duration of his 20-minute speech, bordered on one side by an empty lectern and the other by Mr Hain and deputy party leader Harriet Harman.

He spoke confidently, taking Labour's beleaguered members back to the broad-smiled days of Tony Blair with bold posturing and gesturing.

However, there were signs that Mr Miliband hasn't quite cracked the skills of his power-winning predecessor, with some of his intended applause-generating points and promises failing to hit the mark.

But there were times when Mr Miliband struck audience-pleasing gold, lifting the room to its feet in wild applause. One instance was when the Labour leader spoke out against Prime Minister David Cameron's much-lauded Big Society scheme, which Mr Miliband said "stuck in the throat of the Labour Party".

He said "We know the scale of the challenge we face; there's no short cut or quick fix to this. We need to show the people that our values are their values."

Cabbie reveals scars left by racist violence

A CAB driver who was attacked, racially abused and accused of being a member of the Taliban said he is still traumatised by the incident, more than a year later.

Mohammad Hossain, 34, from Gillingham, was left unconscious and with facial injuries following the attack in Medway in September last year.

A 26-year-old man was jailed for four-and-a-half years for the attack.

Mr Hossain, originally from Bangladesh, told the BBC he found it hard to believe that someone could treat a person in such a way.

The attack took place after he picked up two men and two women in Maidstone, who said they wanted to go to Medway. As Mr Hossain drove he said he was subjected to abuse about his religion, and accusations that he was in the Taliban.

The taxi driver said he was attacked and punched after he stopped his car and asked the group to get out, and added he still has a scar on his face from the jewellery worn by one of his attackers.

"It's going to be there forever," he said.

Mr Hossain has since returned to work, but said he did not feel comfortable, and gets flashbacks.

Support for victims of domestic abuse

THE staggering number of cases of domestic violence has led to the launch of a new strategy reaching out to victims of abuse.

Since 2006, more than 20,000 incidents have been reported in Kent and Medway every year, with a staggering £317 million a year spent on dealing with the effects of violence in the home.

The plan brings together various organisations in a bid to drive down the high number of cases and better protect victims.

It was drawn up by the Kent and Medway Domestic Abuse Strategy Group, made up of representatives from police, criminal justice, local government agencies and support groups, to maximise resources and provide victims with efficient and effective services.

At the heart of the new policy is a commitment from the various agencies to work together more closely and integrate the work they do for victims.

At the moment they each have their own teams working on domestic violence, leading to some doubling up of services.

Christine Missen, Crown Prosecution Services' domestic violence co-ordinator for Kent, said agencies working together would mean help for a victim from the beginning to the end.

"We need to make people much more aware of the support that is available," she said.

"We needed a new approach to this. Victims need help and advice at the start, during the prosecution process and afterwards.

"Through this, we can offer support through every step of the way, such as refuge and protection."

Meanwhile, a third specialist domestic violence court could be opened to tackle the high number of abuse cases.

The county already has two, based in Maidstone and Thanet, but the Kent Criminal Justice Board is working with other agencies with the aim of opening a third in Medway next year.

Plans for a third facility are a result of the high number of prosecutions seen in the county through the specialist courts.

Six months before the Maidstone court was opened in July, 2007, a total of 14 perpetrators were brought to justice – in any six month period now the figure is more than 150.

Terrifying ordeal of women kept as sex slaves by sick traffickers

A HUMAN-trafficker who kept two terrified women as sex slaves for sale has been jailed.

Ivan Gujda, 38, of Albany Road, Chatham, forced the victims to have sex with men across England during a horrific 17-day period. Their nightmare only ended when one of the women escaped the clutches of Gujda and her fellow captors and convinced a Maidstone hotel manager to call police.

Gujda and two fellow traffickers were sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court on Thursday. The court heard how the victims were approached in the Czech Republic to fly to the Republic of Ireland to participate in sham marriages.

When they arrived in Dublin on June 7, this year, they met a group of foreign males and one of the girls was forced to have sex with one of these men. They were then moved into the UK and travelled from Belfast to Stranraer, Scotland, and then on to England.

Gujda pleaded guilty to two counts of human trafficking for sexual exploitation and was sentenced to three years.

Martin Brusch, 31, of no fixed abode, and Dusan Horvat, 37, of Folkestone, both pleaded guilty to two counts of trafficking persons into the UK for sexual exploitation and two counts of trafficking persons within the UK for sexual exploitation.

They were each sentenced to ten years in prison. Det Con Alison Howland, of the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate, who investigated the case, said: "I am pleased with the result of this case which brings a conclusion to months of work by our team."

"This was a complex case with enquiries being carried out in Ireland and the Czech Republic, as well as throughout the UK."

"I would like to thank the authorities in those countries for fantastic cooperation, enabling us to gather evidence which undoubtedly led to their guilty plea."

"I would also like to thank the victims for coming forward and giving us their testimony which enabled us to bring this group to justice and prevent other women from falling prey to this trafficking ring."

"This has been an excellent example of working together to protect victims from this vile trade."

Bull terrier Bella taken by thieves

A PEDIGREE dog has been stolen from its Chatham home.

Bella (pictured left), a tan and white English bull terrier, was taken by three men in Brake Avenue, sometime after 1.30pm on Wednesday, last week.

The thieves claimed they were taking the dog to the RSPCA. PC Maxine Smyth said: "The dog is only a year old and the family are very upset. If anyone has any knowledge of the whereabouts of this animal, contact police as soon as possible."

Anyone with information is asked to call Medway police on 01634 792532, or the free and confidential Crimestoppers line on 0800 555111.

Computer scam warning

COMPUTER users are being warned of a phone scam offering help for a bogus virus.

The scam could result in the perpetrators gaining access to victims' credit card details.

The warning comes from Computer Troubleshooter franchise owner Geoff Wells, who is asking residents to be on the lookout for someone claiming to be from Microsoft or an internet service provider.

Mr Wells said: "The caller will tell you they are following up on a report received about your computer having a problem or a virus."

"They then direct you to an internet address and have you download and install a program that will allow them access to your computer."

"Once this happens, they convince you to pay a fee to fix problems which you really do not have."

"More importantly, they now have access to your computer, your personal information, and your credit card number."

Rare bike lost in shed raid

SPORTS equipment including a rare £1,200 bicycle has been stolen from a Gillingham shed.

Thieves broke into a plot on Rock Avenue between Saturday, November 6, and Tuesday, November 16. The light blue and white Trek 2.1 road bike, was taken along with two other bikes, golf equipment and tools. PC Marissa Murray said: "The owner is very upset to lose his prized bike. We urge anyone who may have seen this bike to contact police as soon as possible."

Vehicles wrecked by fire

A SUSPECTED arsonist is being sought by police after two vehicles caught alight.

The blaze started in Foord Street, Rochester, between 5am and 5.45am on Wednesday, November 10.

A Honda motorcycle and Suzuki Vitara car were wrecked by the fire, believed to have been started nearby. PC Abbi Townsend said: "No one was hurt, but the two vehicles were completely destroyed. Fire crews put the blaze out before it could spread to other vehicles parked nearby."

Anyone with information is asked to call police on 01634 792525, quoting crime reference number DY/17877/10.

Unemployment drops in Medway

THERE are 1,600 less unemployed job-seekers in Medway than there were last year, new figures have shown.

The number of jobless residents has steadily decrease since unemployment peaked at the start of 2010. Medway is now in the top ten highest fallers among the 250 unitary authorities in the country.

The area also boasts the second highest nationwide unemployment drop amongst urban authorities.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) data reveals that the number of residents claiming Job Seekers Allowance fell to as low as 6,052 in October.

This represents 3.6 per cent of the area's workforce and a 21 per cent drop of 1,607 from the 7,659 people who were jobless in January.

The figures also show that youth unemployment has fallen sharply since the beginning of the year, dropping by 745 to 1,785.

This equates to a fall of 29.5 per cent, nearly double the national average of 15.4 and a higher drop than the regional drop of 24 per cent.

Medway Council's economic growth boss Jane Chitty said: "In spite of the recession, we refused to allow this to distract us from the real opportunities and we stand by our commitment to support the people of Medway.

"We are determined to help get Medway back to work and while I accept, there's more work to be done, I'm delighted at these figures.

"Medway Council have responded to the national recession by ensuring that our residents have the services and advice they need to get back into work."

Urgent work needed to save historic castle

CONSERVATIONISTS have stepped up their campaign to preserve Rochester Castle.

The Restore Rochester Castle Campaign group wants to save the walls, floor and roof of the historic 12th century building.

A section of the outer wall of the castle had to be rebuilt last month after collapsing because of heavy rainfall.

Campaigner Jon O'Donnell said the medieval fortress was "decaying faster and faster" and access was restricted because of falling stone.

He said: "Access around the base of the castle is now no longer possible due to falling rag-stone.

"People are now only able to enter with the help of safety netting over the entrance."

Campaign members will be canvassing for support in Rochester High Street from Monday, December 6 to Sunday 12.

A group spokesman said urgent preservation work needed to be carried out on the castle to save it for future generations.

Writing on the official Restore Rochester

■ BY NICK AMES

Castle website they said: "Everyday the castle inner walls are exposed to weather, they are slowly being eroded.

"The inner walls' stone mouldings were not designed to withstand the weather.

"The keep has been briefly assessed and the results were extremely concerning. It is understood water has formed in pools within the keep walls.

"If this water freezes we could see a significant if not a catastrophic collapse of part of the keep."

The castle was built in the middle ages strategically placed along the London Road, guarding an important crossing of the River Medway

The fortress has a complex history of destruction and rebuilding.

Its mighty Norman tower-keep of Kentish ragstone was built around 1127 by William of Corbeil, Archbishop of Canterbury, with the encouragement of King Henry I.

Consisting of three floors above a basement, it still stands 113 feet high.

DECAYING: Conservationists are increasing their campaign efforts to help raise funds to restore Rochester Castle

In 1215, garrisoned by rebel barons, the castle endured an epic siege by King John whose miners managed to bring down one section of the tower, which was subsequently rebuilt.

In recent years it has seen a number of concerts staged in the grounds and remains one of the best examples of a medieval castle in England.

Mr O'Donnell, who chairs the Restore Rochester Castle Committee, added: "We believe we represent the Big Society – people stepping forward to take ownership of our castle and saving it for future generations."

Campaigners plan to raise funds for the castle's restoration, raise awareness about its plight and petition the Department of Culture, Media and Sport for support.

A meeting has been scheduled with the Government body in the coming months.

QUESTION & ANSWER

HELEN BUCKINGHAM

Q What is your role at the PCT?

A I am the acting chief executive. I am accountable to the PCT Board and the people of Medway for ensuring we have good health services in Medway, that the health of people in Medway improves, and that we keep our spending within the Government allocation provided.

Q How did you become involved in healthcare?

A I joined the NHS finance management training scheme when I left university. My mother was a health visitor, her father was a GP and his father and grandfather were pharmacists. So I am the fifth generation of my family to work in healthcare.

Q What is your background?

A I've always worked in the NHS. I trained in Bedfordshire, and then worked in Barnet, Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire again before coming to Medway as director of commissioning and performance in 2009. I've worked in every part of the NHS – hospitals, community and mental health services and GP services.

Q What is the best aspect of your job?

A Without a doubt it is the people I get to work with. We have a fantastic team here in the PCT, and whenever I visit services I am impressed by the commitment and ability of the people who provide care to patients every day. I'm also lucky to be able to spend time talking to people in Medway about the things which are important to them in healthcare.

Q What is the worst aspect of your job?

A We have to make some difficult decisions about the best way to spend taxpayers' money so that we get the best results for the most people. All of us come into the service because we want to make health and healthcare better, and some of the times when we have to say "No, we can't do everything" are very hard. I think it's really important that we have some very honest conversations with people in Medway about that.

Q What is the proudest moment of your career so far?

A There are lots of things I'm proud of, but I think the biggest one is that I've been asked to take on the job I have now – that people trust me to look after the best interests of health in Medway. It's a huge responsibility but it's also a huge honour.

Q Who inspires you in your work and do you have any heroes?

A It may sound corny, but what inspires me is the time I spend with people talking about the NHS in Medway. That doesn't mean everything I see as perfect – if I see something which can be improved I want to make that happen, and when I see a great service it gives me confidence to know we can improve the things which aren't so good. I can't name one hero – there are so many people who I admire in different ways.

Q What areas of the Trust do you think could be improved?

A We've got a few priorities for improving particular services, and those are health promotion – helping people to help themselves not to become ill in the first place. Also, support for people who have long term conditions, such as heart failure or diabetes, so that they are helped to look after themselves and live full lives.

We want to improve other areas too, including urgent care, end of their life care, and services for people with mental health problems.

Q What lies ahead for the Trust and are you confident of a bright future?

A Well, by 2013 the PCT won't actually exist. But I am very confident of a bright future for health in Medway – we will have handed over our responsibilities to local GPs and to Medway Council. GPs are very aware of the challenges the NHS faces, and have great ideas for improving services, and Medway Council is responsible for many of the wider issues which affect people's health so giving them a greater role to play in health can only be a good thing.

Q & A

The acting chief executive of The Primary Care Trust (PCT) for the Medway area shares the best bits of her job, what she wants to see improved and looks to the ever-changing future of healthcare provision

'Dartford toll charges won't be scrapped'

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

DARTFORD crossing toll charges will remain "for the foreseeable future" after the Government admitted it cannot do without the £17 million annual income they provide.

Last month it was announced the cost of using the crossing may rise to £2.50 for car drivers by 2012, despite motorists being promised the levy would be scrapped once the cost of building the QEII Bridge had been met.

But during a Commons debate on congestion at the crossing this week, transport minister Mike Penning said the removal of the tolls was not an option.

He said: "We are in really difficult economic times, and the £17m-a-year gross revenue the tolls take in is an important part of the money available for the infrastructure and transport network for the whole country."

But Mr Penning did reiterate the Government's commitment to reduce congestion and pollution at the crossing by removing the barriers and by looking into the possible construction of a third Thames crossing.

He said that most businesses would rather pay an extra 50p if it meant their drivers were no longer being caught up in huge tailbacks.

"The toll booths are what is really holding up the traffic," he added. "The delays are being caused by people trying to find change, not realising they have to pay, or losing their DART-Tag."

"If we remove the toll booths altogether so people can drive across the bridge or through the tunnels, that delay will be removed."

"The London congestion charge uses vehicle number plate recognition, and it works well. We intend to use that technology to remove the barriers at the north and south of the crossing."

Last Tuesday's debate was secured by Dartford Tory MP Gareth Johnson, who said: "We have recently had an announcement that the price of the tolls should be increased. I cannot accept that extra levy on the motorist, who is feeling fairly beleaguered in this particular part of the country."

"The congestion at the Dartford crossing has united Dartford against the current toll booths system. Local people despise the impact it has had on the area, as we have had nothing but misery, congestion and pollution as a result."

Meanwhile, the transport minister revealed during the debate that it was unlikely the DART-Tag residents' discount scheme would be extended to areas outside of Dartford.

Cutting back the competition

SPORTS leaders have launched an attack on the Government for scrapping school sports funding as thousands of campaigners demand ministers rethink the move.

Kent representatives from the Schools Sports Partnerships (SSP) questioned what kind of message was being sent to the international community ahead of the Olympics and World Cup 2018 bid by cutting funding for the SSP programme.

The globally-acclaimed project encourages competitive opportunities within schools and has seen the number of Kent students taking part in sport twice a week soar.

But the national programme has become one of the many casualties of Government's spending cuts, with plans to axe its entire £162 million funding.

Thousands of students and staff at the county's schools have thrown their weight behind a campaign to save the scheme by signing a petition urging ministers to rethink proposals.

It will be handed in to education secretary Michael Gove on Monday, December 6.

HITTING BACK: Sports leaders slam the Government for sport funds cuts

Kent has 15 SSPs, which encourage sport by introducing new activities, offering competitive opportunities and creating links between communities and clubs.

Peter La Rossignol, competition manager for the Mid-Kent, Ashford, Sheppey and Sittingbourne area, said people were shocked and saddened.

"Government expects this country to do well at a high level across a range of different sports, but how can we with these cuts?" he said.

"I can't see how the country is expected to win the World Cup bid when competitive sport at grassroots level is cut."

"The cuts will only mean more spent on the NHS in a few years time dealing with obesity and heart disease."

Mr La Rossignol said just recently 850 pupils from 38 different schools ran in a cross-country event at Leeds Castle.

"Schools can't organise big events like that, they don't have the time or money," he said.

A mass campaign has been launched by the Thanet SSP and thousands of people in the area have signed a petition against the cuts.

Junior sports leader Paul Ayers, from Hartsdown College in Margate, said: "The Government wants more young people to get involved with sports and as youth leaders we are working hard to achieve this – and then it changes the rules by saying it is going to cut such a fantastic scheme."

But sports minister Hugh Robertson, MP for Faversham and Mid-Kent, defended the Government's decision, saying: "I understand that nobody wants to see any money cut from school sport. However, we have to deal with the national economic crisis that we have inherited which is costing the country £120 million in debt interest payments every day."

Uni staff support protests

LECTURERS from the University of Kent voiced their support for the second wave of student protests held last week.

Professor of urban studies Phil Hubbard and employment relations expert Dr Samantha Lynch were among 295 scholars who spoke out over planned tuition fee increases in a letter to the Guardian newspaper.

It read: "We support the day of protest last Wednesday following the magnificent demonstration by university and school students and by university staff on November 10."

"We are utterly opposed to the destruction of broad-based, critical education and its replacement by education for the market that is enshrined in the Browne report."

"We are defending not just our jobs but the values which brought us into higher education, reflecting the wider significance of education to society."

About 10,000 students took part in a series of marches and gatherings across the country on Wednesday, December 24 but violence flared for the second time in a fortnight.

The young people are angry that from 2012 universities will be able to charge tuition fees of up to £9,000 – almost three times more than the current cap.

The letter continues: "The planned increase in fees means the effective removal of higher education for working people. The coalition has no mandate for its ideologically driven class rule – the anger of students is no surprise."

"We intend to fight them to defend social science, humanities and the arts, and to protect higher and further education for all."

BREAK TIME

Students show they've got bottle

CELEBRITY night-spot Whisky Mist has turned to Rochester students to design a new bottle for its exclusive London bar.

Budding designers from the University of Creative Arts were given a brief by the club and invited to submit their efforts for the bottle that will be available to exclusive clubbers in the Capital.

The entries were judged by jewellery designer Stephen Webster, a business partner of the club and a former UCA student.

Brian Hill, course leader for 3D design, said: "I taught Stephen back when he was a student and have been delighted with his continuing involvement with UCA. As well as judging competitions he also launched a scholarship this academic year."

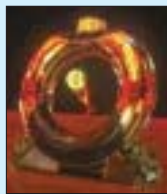

"The brief he and Whisky Mist gave our students was very exciting – they were really challenged to use their creativity and come up with innovative designs."

The £1,000 first prize and winning design went to Sanni Falkenberg and Richard Gamester from the silversmithing, goldsmithing and jewellery course.

The £300 runner up award went to product design student Jamie Stewart.

Brian added: "The judges told the students they were humbled and blown away by the excellent work. They said the quality and diversity of the students' work was higher than that of design consultants they had previously used."

All 31 contestants were rewarded with a free night out at Whisky Mist.

TRAIN TO GAIN: Staff at Kingsnorth Power Station are working towards NVQ qualifications in plant operations thanks to a partnership with MidKent College

College training gives staff the power to achieve more

■ BY DAN COLOMBINI

WORKERS at Kingsnorth Power Station have been returning to their studies thanks to a new qualification offered by MidKent College.

In addition to the 100 workers that have already gained the qualification, the college and the power station are now looking to train a further 120 employees by the end of March.

The course, which is held on site at Kingsnorth, is run in partnership with the college and Norec Limited. It offers workers at the plant the chance to gain a full NVQ qualification in plant operations.

Funded through Train to Gain and subsidised with more than £15,000 from Norec, the scheme is part of a push to improve skills of the national workforce.

Jacqui Brown, head of the college's business development unit, said: "As well as working in partnership with Norec at its Kingsnorth plant, the college is also delighted to be supporting it with training at power stations as far afield as Liverpool and Rugeley."

"The aim is to ensure all the company's operators are fully competent and qualified in their role, across the country."

The qualification has so far been very well received by the new students and has also led to a greater level of efficiency amongst the employees.

Kingsnorth site manager John Huxted said: "We've seen an increase in the enthusiasm of our staff because we've demonstrated through part-funding the training that we value them as employees and are committed to developing their skills."

"We've also seen an increase in competency amongst the workers."

His sentiments were confirmed by Kingsnorth staff member Garrick Capp who has recently completed the course.

He said: "We only did in-house training before. I've worked here for eight years, but feel much more confident in my role now. I'm also happy to have my first nationally-recognised qualification in plant operations, as I can take it with me when I move on from here."

"As a manager I like to know my staff are trained to a high-quality, national standard. This opportunity was one we couldn't miss."

City Status delivery is full of errors

The Labour Group will be supportive of the principle of Medway campaigning for City Status in 2012 but have reservations about the current practical delivery of this.

In particular, real concern was raised on Thursday night, where the issue was debated at full council, on the presumptuous re-branding which has already taken place prior to any decision being made on City Status. This concern was heightened by the comments reported in the local media by the Conservative Deputy Leader Alan Jarrett stating: "We can call ourselves what we like".

Although we are supportive of the principle of Medway applying for City Status, there have been some clear errors in delivery to date which could well have an impact on the final outcome. We also believe the private sector supporters who have aligned themselves with the bid should be helping with funding the bid so there is ideally no further public money spent on the bid in these difficult times.

Labour Group Leader, Cllr Paul Godwin

Menace drivers should do jail time

She should have been sent to jail for this crime. The courts are treating drivers who pose a menace to other road users and pedestrians too lightly. If this had been a cyclist committing an offence imagine what the fine would be!

Join the march to stop climate change

Demonstrators from Kent will be going to go to London for the annual Climate March on Saturday, December 4, assembling at Speaker's Corner, Hyde Park at noon.

Politicians, scientists and campaigners are also preparing to go to Cancun, Mexico for crucial Climate Change talks.

We don't really need to listen to Labour leader Ed Miliband for four years, says Gary Wright

LABOUR leader Ed Miliband chose Gillingham as the place to convince the country he is the man who can build a party people will want to vote for again.

I was surprised he chose Kent. No one could see the county as a Labour stronghold, but by the same token it's counties like Kent where he will have to convince people he has something to offer.

At the moment it really doesn't matter what Labour says it would do on this, or what its policy is on that – the party isn't in power, so why should anyone listen?

Red, as he's affectionately known, has other problems too. The mess inherited by Cameron and Clegg was bigger than anyone could have imagined.

So, criticism by Ed and his shadow cabinet is easily overcome: Labour would have had to do the same or it's Labour's fault anyway.

My gut feeling is the party is over-reacting to its General Election loss with its new-found taste for humble pie, admissions of how terrible and arrogant it became and beating itself up to win our love again.

It's pretty simple really.

Firstly, people had had enough of Gordon Brown. Despite being the man who found a way through the banking crisis for world leaders, he was also responsible for getting Britain too deeply into the mess in the run up to it. Plus he wasn't good on telly and seemed a bit of an angry bully off it.

Secondly, people had had enough of Labour in power. It was time for change.

Ed wants to chuck out everything and start with a clean sheet, which includes keeping the 50p tax rate for the wealthy; marching with students on Whitehall (unless he's doing something else) and supporting middle income workers earning between £16,000 and £40,000. Or maybe £50,000, he's not too sure yet.

Instead of dumping New Labour ideals (socialism no, market economy yes), Ed might be able to avoid getting himself in such a mess by simply taking the best of what he already has.

It is no use returning to the Punch and Judy politics of the Thatcher years. Labour is in Opposition. Ed says it will take two years to make his party electable, so get on with scrutinising what the Coalition does and highlighting its weaknesses. Better still, ensure your MPs represent constituents properly – which is their job, after all – that's the way to get re-elected.

Ed arrived in Gillingham on Saturday promising to listen. Five days before, he'd told MPs being in opposition was "crap". I suspect they'll get used to it soon enough though and it may not be so "crap" for us.

His biggest personal worry is big brother David, still smarting from losing the leadership race. He has been thanking everyone who did support him. A cynic might suggest the underlying message is: 'I hope I can count on you next time'.

But most of us don't need to listen to Ed until four years' time... when the next General Election is due.

If there is a story in your area you think we should be covering contact the news editor, Simon Robinson, on 01303 817185 or email him on the details above. If you want to be the next Medway blogger then all you have to do is submit an article to us (of around 550 words) and email it to the editor. thousands of people and resist Climate Change at the same time. Climate Change means more moisture is held in the atmosphere, creating a likelihood of more extreme weather events.

Kent's coastline and estuaries are very vulnerable to significant changes unless cuts of about 90 per cent in greenhouse gas emissions are achieved by 2050.

But Kent County Council's Local Transport Plan does not even propose measures to cut traffic year on year, in order to cut emissions.

Only 14 out of 27 EU countries are likely to meet their current emissions targets. EU leaders have agreed the major step of seeking cuts in the two fastest growing sectors of greenhouse gas emissions, aviation and shipping, but so far without resources to achieve this.

We have to do better.

Steve Dawe, former lecturer in environmental policy and a current lecturer in public policy

Paws for thought with Christmas gifts

This Christmas, millions of us will spend precious time and money choosing pointless gifts for people who don't really want them. So instead of following this crazy and costly routine, why not surprise someone instead with a much-needed gift in aid of poorly pets?

Net charity PDSA has hundreds of 'virtual gifts' for sale this Christmas. And they are the perfect gift choice for someone in your life who loves animals. By purchasing a gift you help care for sick and injured pets across the UK. They are so simple to buy and once you've chosen your virtual present you can personalise an attractive greetings card too.

There's a wide range of gifts starting from as little as £13, which would pay for over 25 metres of bandages, right up to £1,800, which would buy an operating table. To browse the full range of presents available, visit www.wellvettedgifts.co.uk, but hurry the last order date is December 20.

As a charity we receive no government or lottery funding for our PetAid services, so we rely on the generosity of animal lovers to help raise the £50 million needed to care for poorly pets each year. So please help if you can.

Tina Sleight, trading manager, PDSA Head Office

ID cards battle over, but the war goes on

ID cards are being scrapped, and with them the National Identity Register and the ContactPoint Children's database – a success for NO2ID.

I would like to publicly thank all those who supported and helped with our campaign – not just in my own branch but across East and Mid-Kent.

So, is it all over? No. A bureaucratic obsession with ID and information sharing goes on, and so do we. Your finances, your travel by plane or car, who you call and email, soon your medical records ... all are starting to be captured and made available for "mining".

A 2009 report looked at 46 big government database projects. It found more than half damage personal privacy or create other risks. Only two of those have since been cancelled.

We define the database state as the trend to manage society by collecting data, mass surveillance, an authoritarian oversight of all aspects of our lives. NO2ID continues to campaign against state identity management and the abuse of personal information, and for individual control of what is private.

Our campaigns concern a proposed centralised electoral register with local authority powers to cross-match data to track those who don't register, medical confidentiality and the NHS Spine (not yet rolled out in Kent: but coming), tracking travellers through e-passports and e-Borders, abuse of DNA records, snooping on internet and telephone use, and police logging of all car journeys using ANPR cameras.

The government needs some information to work, but they always take and use much more than they need. You may have to deal with them, but you can't say what they can do with that data.

In a few years it has become "normal" to be asked to provide ID, proof of address or other details by people who don't need them. More is officially gathered, cross-checked, passed on – even to other countries.

You should have the right to decide who knows what about you. "We know where you live" is an old threat. The database state means state control of personal identity – with or without ID cards.

Ian Taylor, NO2ID Local Group Co-ordinator (Dover)

Animals not answer for third world poor

Christian Aid, Oxfam and other aid agencies are once again tapping into public disquiet over the existence of plenty in the midst of hunger and asking you to make a Christmas gift of a farmed animal to an impoverished person in Africa, or in another of the world's poorest regions.

This is despite mounting evidence that animal farming is environmentally destructive; an inefficient user of agricultural land, water and energy; and that it generates disproportionately high volumes of global warming gases.

Because meat and milk production consume such high levels of precious resources, only communities with surplus wealth can afford them. A 'gift' of animals to destitute communities, who are without such resources, will simply impoverish them further.

It is far more rational to support such people in growing food that they can eat directly.

There is also the very real issue of animal suffering. Where people are unable to provide adequate food, water, shelter and veterinary care, animals get sick and die wretched deaths. This is the case, currently, in the drought-ravaged regions of Kenya.

Please support agencies that help people, animals and the environment. For details contact Animal Aid.

FULSTON MANOR goes FUL-TASH!!

One man every hour dies from prostate cancer in the UK.

The staff and students from Fulston Manor School, Sittingbourne, are playing their part in supporting this very important cause. Those that can, are growing a moustache for the whole month of November.

They are hoping to raise over £500 from activities in school and donations on-line.

The charity is the Movember Foundation in support of The Prostate Cancer Charity, both of whom have been responsible for raising the profile of this fatal men's health issue.

For more information or to make a donation visit uk.movember.com/donate and search for "FulTash Manor School".

Mel's the lady in the lamp

ALADDIN

Thursday, December 2, to Sunday, January 9
Churchill Theatre, Bromley

CAST your mind back to 1997 if you can. Oasis and Blur rule the airwaves, Chris Evans was the king of Friday nights and the internet was little more than a twinkle in a nerd's pair of spectacles.

It was also the era when Melinda Messenger became a household name, seemingly out of nowhere.

The tabloid press latched on to the blonde bombshell, and in the blink of an eye she was a nation's sweetheart.

It was an advertising campaign for a regional window firm that set her on the path to celebrity status in 1997.

"It was a bit of a whirlwind to be honest," she said. "One moment I was advertising double glazing, the next I was on the phone to The Sun and they were asking me to be in the newspaper."

Labelled for a time as Britain's answer to Pamela Anderson, Melinda went out to Hollywood, where she spoke to the producers of Baywatch – the most successful show of the time.

They invited her to appear as one of Malibu's red swimsuit-wearing, bronzed goddesses, but she turned it down.

"I was offered a part but I didn't quite fancy it in the end. I was a little freaked out by the level of fame I'd achieved here, so to be that famous didn't appeal at the time.

"I was happy with how it was going and knew that if I went global there wouldn't be anywhere to hide! I just didn't really fancy it."

Now though, Melinda is starring in Aladdin as the powerful wish-granting Genie of the Lamp, at the Churchill Theatre in Bromley.

It is her sixth pantomime.

She said: "I always enjoy it. I think the Genie is one of the best parts to play. It's one either sex can play, but I think it works very well as a female part. You can really go to town with it, although I'd really like to be a pantomime dame one year, as they probably have the most fun of all the cast members. We have a few in this version of Aladdin.

"The rehearsals have been going really well. We're having a lot of fun and the two and a half weeks will fly by, I'm sure, and soon we'll be actually on stage in front of the audience, which is where the real fun takes place."

For 13 years Melinda has worked in a variety of roles, but really found her niche as a presenter and currently fronts Cowboy Builders on Five.

"That show has really worked well for me. I enjoy it as it is helping people who have had their homes ruined, and we put it right. I like that, being able to help someone with a TV show, it really makes you feel good about being involved in it."

Melinda says her own three children will be coming along to see their mum at the Churchill, when the show starts.

"They are just the right age now, so it will be good fun for them to come. My youngest was a bit too young the last time I was in one, but now she's very intrigued how I'm going to get out of the lamp," she said.

On motherhood, she said: "I love being a mum, it's amazing, but it's a lot of responsibility. Get a dog and then times it by a thousand and then you'll know. It changes your life totally, and it's a never-ending responsibility but a very wonderful one to have and I'm very lucky to have them."

Aladdin runs from December 2 to January 9, at the Churchill Theatre in Bromley.

Tickets are priced £18 to £25 and available by calling 08448 717 636 or visiting [www.ambassador tickets.com/Bromley](http://www.ambassador tickets.com/Bromley).

THAT'LL BE THE DAY

Monday, December 13, The Orchard Theatre, Dartford.

THE Nation's Favourite Rock 'n' Roll Show is coming to The Orchard Theatre.

That'll be the Day invokes the spirit of some of the greatest eras in popular music and will rock your socks off.

From Buddy Holly to Queen, versions of tracks by all your heroes are included.

The UK's most successful touring rock 'n' roll production, the legendary That'll Be The Day, returns with a new 2010 Christmas Show.

Trevor, Gary and the gang celebrate the festive season by bringing on back the good times with a combination of their unique comedy routines mixed with a non-stop line-up of all the best Christmas hits to produce a show with a real feel good party atmosphere.

Join in the cast and treat yourself to an early Christmas present, that will live in the memory this festive season.

Time Out magazine called it "the best rock 'n' roll show on the road!"

The performance starts at 7.45pm. Tickets are available at www.orchardtheatre.co.uk or by calling the box office 01322 220000.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

Friday, December 10, to Sunday, December 12, Leeds Castle, near Maidstone

CELEBRATE Christmas with The Chapterhouse Theatre Company's brand new adaptation of A Christmas Carol, the Charles Dickens classic.

This production is staged in a heated marquee on the Cedar Lawn and features Tiny Tim and Bob Cratchit, the father and son with little money for the festive period.

Ebenezer Scrooge and of course Marley the ghost will bring a sparkle of magic to your Christmas festivities.

The attitude of the miserly Scrooge is changed by the ghosts of Christmas past, future and present and he is made to realize the error of his ways, as well as be scared witless!

He slowly realises the situation that the less better off members of society deserve to be happy, in one of Dicken's most enduring stories.

The Victorian tale has been adapted for stage and screen over the years but this production promises to be up there with the best.

Leave your inner humbug at the door for this heart-warming yuletide story that is guaranteed to get you in the mood for a fine Christmas.

Evening performances take place at 7pm, and there is a matinee performance at 1pm on Friday, December 10. Tickets cost £15 adult; £12 for children; £12 concessions.

FINLEY QUAYE

Friday, December 10, Pizza Express, Maidstone

BACK in the mid to late 90s Finley Quaye made an interesting counterpoint to the heavily guitar-laden Britpop explosion with his fusion of reggae, pop, rock and soul.

His debut album Maverick A Strike is described by some critics as a masterpiece and it certainly captured a moment in time as he became one of the best known singer songwriters of that period.

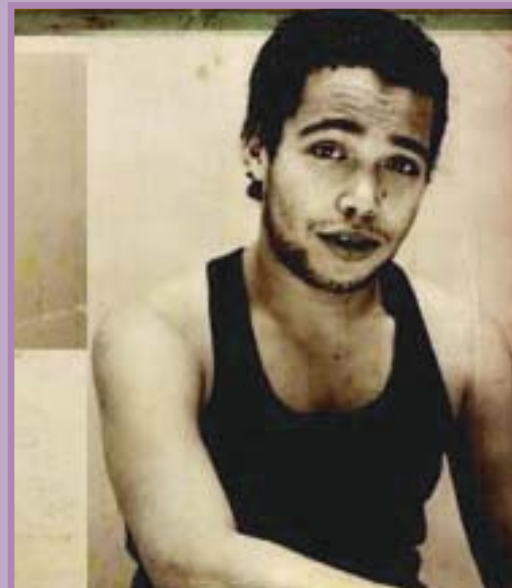

The Scottish-born man's following two albums were released on Epic, with Vanguard in 2000 and Much More Than Much Love in 2004.

Hits include Love Gets Sweeter, Sunday Shining, Even After All and he will showcase his distinctive slick vocal work as a former MOBO winner and Beth Orton collaborator.

Quaye, who still gigs regularly and is working on a new album with a brand new band, will be bowling up at Pizza Express in Maidstone for a gig as part of the chain's Pizza Express Live project.

Doors open at 7pm, and he takes to the stage at 8pm. Tickets are £26 per person.

Visit www.pizzaexpresslive.com to book tickets or call 0845 6027 017 to find out more.

THE MOUSE WHO SAVED CHRISTMAS

December 6 to December 21, The Brook Theatre, Chatham

THIS charming tale of a mouse who pulls out all the stops is aimed especially at children aged three to six.

The 50-minute story is packed with music and participation as you join Archie the intrepid mouse for his colorful and exciting adventures.

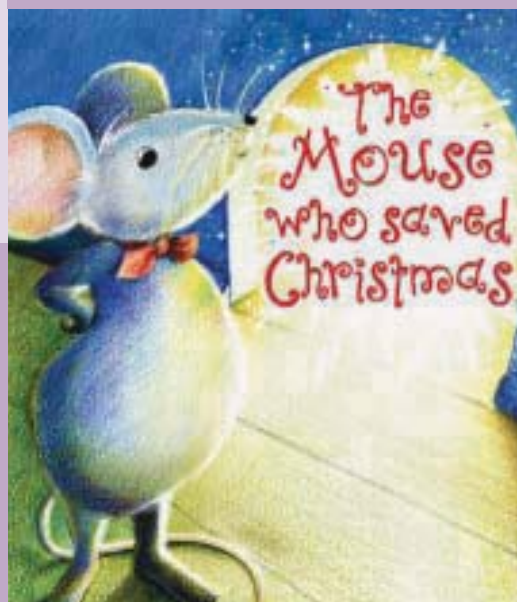

He needs help to make his Christmas party go with a swing, but someone has played a trick on Santa and he needs help to save the day.

The warm show will help fire the imaginations of youngsters and stimulate their senses, as they journey through different scenes in the main auditorium.

The play is the perfect way to get your children out of the house during the holidays.

It has been written, produced and directed by the theatre's resident professional performing arts companies: Play of Words Theatre Company, Icon Theatre and the Loop Dance Company.

Performances are at 11am, 1pm and 3pm each day. There are no performances on Friday, November 10 or Friday, November 17. Tickets cost £6.50 for children and adults. Group offers are available. Call 01634 338338 or visit www.whatsonmedway.co.uk

JAZZ NIGHT

Wednesday, December 8, Dickens World, Chatham

THE 144 Club presents a night of jazz at Dickens World as part of a Christmas Jazz Spectacular.

The event will feature trumpet player of some standing Henry Lowther.

He has been described by Jazz Journal as having no superiors amongst European jazzmen, and precious few anywhere.

Henry has worked on the jazz scene with star names such as Mike Gibbs, John Taylor, John Surman, Stan Tracey and Kenny Wheeler and was a member of the Peter King Quintet for eight years.

He is one of only two or three trumpeters who have played lead trumpet with both Gil Evans and George Russell.

Unusually for a jazz musician, Henry is also engaged frequently as a classical trumpeter by major symphony orchestras, and has recorded with Simon Rattle, the London Sinfonietta and the London Buss Virtuosi, of which he is a regular member.

He was also the featured flugelhorn soloist with the strings of the BBC Radio Orchestra until its demise.

He's joined by Roan Kearsley-Lawson (pictured), a supreme vibesman.

Don't miss a great selection of jazz including Christmas favourites such as Let Snow, Winter Wonderland, Sleigh Ride and more.

The show takes place in the Britannia Theatre at the attraction.

For more information visit www.144club.co.uk.

WIN! Loads of Hornby goodies

HORNBY is a household name and is famous as the UK brand leader in the model railway hobby.

The company's founder was Frank Hornby (1863-1936) who applied for a patent in 1901 to protect an invention he called 'Improvements in Toy or Educational Devices for Children and Young People'. Nobody then could have imagined how this product would influence the model railway hobby that we know today.

One lucky winner will win a Hornby Blue Rapier set, Scalextric digital lane change set and 12 visitor passes to have a day at the Hornby Visitor Centre at Margate for a fascinating journey through the history of Britain's best-loved toys.

For your chance of winning the great Christmas prize just answer this simple question:

Q) What is the first name of the British F1 driver ..... Hamilton?

- Lewis
- David
- Jason

COMMUTER travel entered a new age during 2009 when the sleek and revolutionary Hitachi Class 395 entered service. This new state-of-the-art train with its twin power source motors quickly became the train of choice for those commuters who use the Southeastern service to London every day, saving those in the extremities of the service as much as 30 minutes or more of travel time.

The specially prepared three vehicle model in this set is resplendent in the distinctive blue livery of the prototype and is justifiably named the "Blue Rapier". Additional RailRoad coaches are available to extend the train to a full six car unit. Both power and dummy cars have headlights that operate in the direction of travel. The track circuit fits easily on the 1600 x 1270cm MidiMat and by adding Hornby Track Packs and accessory packs can soon be developed into a very effective model railway layout.

Contents

- Driver Trailer (Motorised), • Driver Trailer (Non-Motorised), • Two open coaches, (NB. Both vehicles have non-working pantographs).
- Track: 3rd Radius Starter Oval, Track Pack A (with point and buffer stop), P9000WWall Plug Transformer, R8250 Train Controller, R8206 Power Track, Hornby MidiMat (1600 x 1270).

THIS set allows you to race up to four cars at the same time (two cars are provided), performing amazing, realistic overtaking and braking manoeuvres. You can switch lanes at the touch of a button to overtake or block your opponent.

This set includes everything you need to get started with Scalextric Digital - it features an oval circuit and comes supplied with two Digital Chip installed cars.

Additional digital cars are available or you can easily convert most standard cars to run on digital layouts.

The super resistant Nissan GT-R and Aston Martin DBR9 feature change pick-ups and the Magnatraxion™ system to help them stay on the circuit.

Four cars can be raced simultaneously using the powerbase provided in the set or upgrade to the Advanced Six Car Digital Powerbase (C7042) for six car races plus a host of additional features.

Digital layouts are fully compatible with standard Scalextric track pieces.

Nowhere to run as past comes gunning for assassin Clooney

■ BY DAMON SMITH

BASED on the Martin Booth novel A Very Private Gentleman, director Anton Corbijn's follow-up to the award-winning Ian Curtis biopic Control is a meticulously crafted portrait of a man of violence trying to escape his grim fate.

Predictably, the antihero can only outrun the past for so long before it catches up with him and demands bloodthirsty redemption.

George Clooney is on screen for almost every frame in the title role, his face etched with weariness as an assassin who has grown tired of always looking over his shoulder.

Without the star power of its leading man, The American would struggle to find an audience outside the arthouse circuit.

It's an unremittingly bleak and slow-burning study of solitude, epitomised by a remarkable and protracted sequence in which the titular character drives towards the white light at the end of a long tunnel.

Corbijn refuses to cut away from inside the car as the white light expands, illuminating the driver until the entire screen is filled with blinding white.

Following a bungled assassination attempt in Sweden, hitman Jack (George Clooney) decides to abandon the killing game once and for all. He phones handler Pavel (Johan Leysen), who suggests that Jack should lay low in the Italian town of Castelvecchio.

"Don't talk to anyone and, above all, don't make any friends. You used to know that," scolds Pavel.

The hit man drives to the remote community and on the spur of the moment disobeys orders and sets up camp in nearby Castel Del Monte.

By day, Jack keeps himself busy by constructing a custom-made weapon for mysterious client Mathilde (Thekla Reuten).

STATE OF THE UNION: Thekla Reuten as Mathilde and George Clooney as Jack in The American

By night, he enjoys the carnal delights of local prostitute, Clara (Violante Placido). As Jack's paranoia takes hold, he seeks counsel from local holy man, Father Benedetto (Paolo Bonacelli). "A man can be rich if he has God in his heart," contends the priest.

"I don't think God is interested in me, Father," mocks Jack, fearing he is well past the point of no return.

The American is an engrossing character study, enlivened by explosions of violence including a night-time car chase that is as close as the film strays to an action set-piece.

Corbijn makes excellent use of the stunning European locations and keeps himself, and us, amused with interesting shots.

Thus, the throwaway image of a train arriving at a platform in Rome is captured as a reflection in one of the station display boards.

In the absence of bright colours in the film's palette, Clooney sparks a dazzling screen chemistry, in very different ways, with Placido and Bonacelli, the latter wearing his dog collar with conviction.

"You are American. You think you can escape history," laments Father Benedetto.

As Jack discovers, there is no escape.

PERIOD DRAMA: Andrew Buchan stars as the engaging barrister William Garrow

YOUR TV REVIEW

GARROW'S LAW: Sunday, 9pm, BBC1

■ BY JENNY ARMSTRONG

IF you have been missing your weekly Sunday evening hit of high period drama after the conclusion of ITV's hit show Downton Abbey, you can now breathe easy.

The good old BBC has dutifully replaced Downton, in exactly the same 9pm pre-work stress busting slot, with another hour long ode to times past. But unlike ITV's genial offering, which peddles history as a side order to drama, frocks and country piles, Garrow's Law tells the story of seminal events in the criminal justice system.

It follows the life of William Garrow (Andrew Buchan), a dashing young barrister kicking up a storm in the Old Bailey with his progressive views about justice and equality.

It seems Garrow, who later went on to be a judge and solicitor general for England and Wales, was the man who coined the phrase "innocent until proven guilty", used as a mantra in legal trials to this day. He also championed the adversarial system of justice still practised in courts today, where both the prosecution and the defence have their say in court.

As one would expect, Garrow's Law includes its fair share of court scenes with judges and barristers in full fig, as well as gasps and shouts from the public gallery rendered unlikely by their frequency and volume.

And they are great cases too – ones with shocking messages about the way justice was conducted and what used to be illegal.

In one case the captain of a slave ship is standing trial for insurance fraud because he threw 50 of his slaves overboard on false pretences, but the act is not treated as murder.

But court does not dominate the programme. There is a love interest in the form of the delicious Lady Sarah (Lyndsey Marshal), pretty frocks, big houses and several other story lines to keep the interest going.

Sadly, Garrow's Law does not glide through the period as effortlessly as Downton did. The budget is clearly lower, the cast not as stellar and some of the sets come off a bit more Blackadder than Bronte. And as this is now the second series of Garrow's Law, a lot of back story is assumed in terms of the relationship between Garrow and Lady Sarah, which adds a mite of confusion.

But all in all, it is a fair replacement to Downton and far more educational to boot.

Christmas made for Bad Manners

BAD BOYS: Buster and the gang are bringing their Christmas tour to the Quarterhouse

■ BY SIMON ROBINSON

MY PARENTS were wrong – bad manners should not be forcibly discouraged, rather actively encouraged.

Sure, talking with your mouth full is disgusting, talking while someone else is speaking is obnoxious and those animals who stubbornly refuse to punctuate their utterings with neither 'please' nor 'thank you' deserve to be shot.

But bad manners are still a-ok in my book.

After all, how can you dislike one of the 1980s most widely-known two-tone acts, famed for hits such as Lip Up Fatty, My Girl Lollipop and the Can Can?

I'll accept that The Specials and Madness hold a larger chunk of the genre's place in my heart, but hearing Buster Bloodvessel and his boys never fails to lighten the mood of this hardened-hack.

So, imagine my Christmas Day Scrooge epiphany-esque delight when I learned Bad Manners were playing a festive gig at The Quarterhouse in Folkestone next month.

I was overjoyed.

A Quarterhouse spokesman was equally buoyant.

He said: "Buster Bloodvessel and his band of merry men – Bad Manners are joining us as part of their Special Christmas Tours, and they're not leaving til you've skanked like Santa Claus.

"Having played a fair bit locally, the band's live support around here remains second-to-none, as proven by their gig at this year's Lounge On The Farm festival, drawing a crowd just as big as that of the headline act Toots & the Maytals. And they put on just as good a show, if not better, to match it."

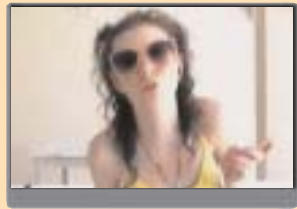

Support on the night comes from Max Splodge, hero of Splodgenessabounds and Two

Christmas magic is bigger and better at Disneyland

■ BY TOM WILKINSON

FALLING snow, a parade of princesses and a lollipop the size of a dinner plate – my three-year-old thought her Christmas had come early at Disneyland Paris, and perhaps it had.

The giant resort stretches out the festive period from the first weekend in November to January, with a spectacular show of glitz, glamour and razzmatazz, enough to warm the heart of this old Scrooge.

It's impossible not to get carried away with the fun when you see it through the eyes of a mesmerised daughter, who could not stop beaming after meeting Mickey Mouse and Disney's newest heroine Rapunzel, whose movie is not even out yet.

Rosie and I travelled to Disneyland Paris for a weekend break from St Pancras International. Soon we were at Marne la Vallée station, practically on the doorstep of the two theme parks and retail village.

Our Hotel New York was a couple of minutes' walk away, and we swiftly checked in next to the huge Christmas tree in the lobby.

But that tree was dwarfed by the 24-metre tall, 24-tonne pine that Disney unveiled at the start of its Christmas celebrations.

The tree, in the square of Main Street USA, boasts almost 500 bulbs, and the star at the top is lit every night in a charming ceremony.

Disney doesn't really do darkness, as more than a million lights illuminate the Town Square, Main Street and Sleeping Beauty's Castle over Christmas.

Main Street is the venue for the Dreams of Christmas Parade, when all your favourite cartoon heroes pass before your eyes on floats, in an all-singing, all-dancing spectacular.

FACT FILE: DISNEYLAND PARIS

Time difference	+One hour (GMT)
Capital	Cinderella's Castle
Language	International
Population	up to 500,000 daily
Currency	Disney dollar
Religion	All faiths welcomed

Tom Wilkinson was a guest of Disneyland Paris which offers three-day packages via Eurostar in December from £412 per adult and £178 per child (7-11), and £65 per child (4-5, travel only). Under-7s stay and play free until December 31. Package including two nights' B&B at Disney's Hotel New York and three-day hopper tickets for Disneyland Park and Walt Disney Studios Park. Same package at Disney's Hotel Santa Fe from £287 per adult, £178 per child. Disneyland Paris reservations: 0844 800 8111 and www.disneylandparis.com

It proved to be a highlight for my little one, and for hundreds if not thousands of others who lined the parade route to get a good view.

When the float carrying all the princesses, including her all-time favourites Jasmine (from Aladdin) and Ariel (from the Little Mermaid), arrived, Rosie's eyes were on stalks.

For Christmas, Santa has been invited to set up his workshop, and children drop off letters for him.

There was so much going on, it would be easy to miss something great. Luckily, Rosie was too small for some of the more scary rides, as we could never have crammed everything in.

When we weren't star-spotting – tennis ace Rafa Nadal was visiting when we were there – Rosie and I tackled as many rides as we could.

Her undoubted favourite was a gentle boat ride called It's A Small World, which takes the visitor on a five-minute trip round the globe, populated with dancing dolls.

Over in the neighbouring Walt Disney Studios Park, Rosie loved the recent Slinky Dog Zigzag ride, for novice rollercoaster riders, and the Aladdin-themed Flying Carpets Over Agrabah, where you can make your carpet rise and fall as it spins.

Some rides get very busy, but quieten in the final hour of opening, as visitors with younger children leave early. Disney also uses a Thor Fastpass system which allows you to 'pre-book' a place on popular rides.

Disneyland Paris staff use both French and English and even the shows are bilingual.

As Santa waved us off, my daughter did not bat an eyelid when he wished us both a "Goodnight" and a "Bonne soiree".

Well, that's the magic of Disney.

MOTORS NEWS

Turbocharged Mondeo fuelling the fightback

FORD'S updated Mondeo line-up features a new hi-tech 1.6-litre turbocharged petrol EcoBoost engine.

It's part of a fightback by petrol against diesel through sporty performance, but with better economy and emissions than before.

This new 160PS (158bhp) 1.6 unit with a six-speed manual gearbox can average more than 40mpg and emits 158g CO2/km.

Its diesel rival, the 2.0TDCi, delivers more than 50mpg and 139g/km CO2, but offers little extra on company car tax or acceleration, and is £1,000 dearer.

Mazda hatch's diesel option for New Year

MAZDA has given its family hatchback Mazda3 model a New Year boost, with power, emissions and economy improvements to the 1.6 diesel (from £16,505).

Arriving in January, this model meets more stringent emissions regulations and features a new six-speed manual gearbox.

It should further drive Dartford-based Mazda UK's ambitions in fleet sales.

Low emissions allow it to escape road tax in year one and incur just £30 a year thereafter. It also averages in the mid-60s for mpg.

Desirable Peugeot star coupé boosts ratings

PEUGEOT'S stunning RCZ Coupé has confirmed its desirability by outperforming used car valuations from market watchers at CAP.

Fifteen examples of the new sporting icon, launched this summer, averaged 103 per cent of expected valuations at auction.

Bidding to secure this desirable stock, Peugeot dealers even went to £23,500 for a flagship example – 111 per cent of the CAP forecast. This is no surprise; the RCZ is good to drive, economical and affordable – new or secondhand.

CONTENDER: Volvo's S60 will give BMW's 3-Series a run for its money in the driving department – and anyone along for the ride can luxuriate in its first-class cabin comforts

Proper driver's car your passengers will love too

ROAD TEST VOLVO S60

BY STEVE LOADER

STAR QUALITY

Driving appeal	★★★★★
Image	★★★★★
Space	★★★★★
Value	★★★★★
Running costs	★★★★★
Reliability	★★★★★
Green rating	★★★★★

The Volvo is a driver's car, too, but a nicer car for passengers. And this also applies to cabin ambience, which is first class.

Refinement is generally good at all speeds and particularly on motorways, though Volvo's five-cylinder diesel sounded raucous under pressure in our high-spec SE Lux review car.

Nevertheless, the popular D5 is well-matched to the new S60 with the 202bhp output delivering loads of low-down power for both press-on and lazy motoring situations and helped by a light and well-spaced six-speed gearbox allowing an average mpg of well over 50.

Even the all-new five-cylinder 163bhp 2.0-litre D3 engine has to work hard to better that.

The new S60 may be specified with a ground-breaking pedestrian detection package, which can stop a collision with a pedestrian up to 21mph, and dramatically reduce speed above that, with potentially life-saving consequences, but will people really cough up an extra £1,350 for such a selfless feature?

Standard S60 kit is generous and includes electronic climate and cruise controls, colour screen for the 'infotainment' system, steering wheel audio controls, alloys and leather-clad wheel and gearshift.

Estate agents welcome new licensing scheme

A NEW licensing scheme for estate agents is to be launched, which experts say will lead to a rise in standards in the business.

According to the National Association of Estate Agents (NAEA), most estate agents are reputable, but anyone can start up as an estate agent in the UK without qualifications or formal checks.

The new scheme was described by housing minister, Grant Shapps, as a symbolic moment, while the NAEA said it hopes the scheme will represent honesty for agents.

The launch of the scheme means an estate agent will need to have the necessary level of professional indemnity insurance, be bound by the NAEA agents' rules of conduct and commit to undertaking 12 hours of training on the latest developments every year.

Those who are found to be breaking the rules could end up at a tribunal, or thrown out of the scheme.

Peter Bolton King, chief executive of the NAEA, said: "From today, estate agency in the UK is a two-tiered industry – those agents who are licensed and those who are not."

"I think the public will welcome the distinction, and I believe that this move will raise standards across the industry."

Elderly forced to sell up to pay for care homes

SOME 20,000 pensioners across the UK are being forced to sell their homes to pay for residential care every year.

According to a recent survey, the number of elderly property owners having to sell up so they can go into a care home stands at almost 60 per day; a third of those funding their own care end up without a house. This is an increase of 17 per cent since 2005.

The recent cuts to local authority budgets mean that this situation is unlikely to improve. Furthermore, FirstStop Advice states that care home fees have risen by more than 20 per cent over the past five years – making the current average £25,896.

Those who don't have savings or property to sell get their care paid for by the state.

This has sparked anger among many, who argue that the system is unfair and makes lifelong saving pointless, as well as meaning that families won't receive any inheritance.

Make most of interest rates, before they rise

■ BY NICK AMES

INTEREST rates on mortgages are set to increase, and cheap mortgages are unlikely to stick around for long, according to the consultancy Ducalian.

Research by Sainsbury's Home Insurance revealed that the cost of running a home had fallen by almost 14 per cent in the past two years, and now stands at around £8,059 a year.

Timothy Lambert, head of consulting at Ducalian, said that most people would be rather surprised by the figures.

However, he said: "Lots of local authorities have frozen council tax and some boroughs such as Hammersmith & Fulham have actually lowered them, year on year."

Mr Lambert went on to say that the main reason was that mortgages were currently cheap for many, which "vastly sways" the statistics.

"But rates will rise over the course of the next few years as interest rates rise and cheaper products that run for a fixed period come to an end," he warned.

The annual cost of running a home, estimated by Sainsbury's Home Insurance, equates to £155 a week, or £22.08 a day, per household.

In 2008, household expenses were found to be almost £1,300 higher, at £9,324 a year.

Meanwhile the market continues to be uncertain.

Housebuilder Taylor Wimpey said it had experienced a homebuyer slowdown, as a result of the Government's spending cuts, which it claims has deterred potential buyers.

Its comments echo those of Persimmon, who said there was little evidence of the traditional autumn period, which usually sees families flock to new housing developments as the school summer holidays end.

However, Taylor Wimpey, which is the UK's second largest homebuilder by volume, said it expects annual profit at the higher end of estimates, boosted by "stable" trading, and an agreement reached on a new £950 million credit facility.

The company, which was formed by the merger of Taylor Woodrow and George Wimpey, said: "We expect to enter 2011 with a solid order book, and we remain focused on our strategy of maximising margins and returns, rather than looking to accelerate volume growth."

Many housebuilders have expressed their concern that the ongoing lack of mortgage availability, particularly to first-time buyers, continues to be a "major obstacle" and is holding back the recovery of the housing market.

It's curtains for wasted energy

RESIDENTS of period properties are being told they can reduce their energy bills by closing their curtains or shutters at dusk.

Researchers claim it could be as effective as fitting double glazing and lead to significant savings.

The World Heritage Trust has been using thermal imaging cameras to show residents of old and new homes how best to cut their bills.

The project has demonstrated a traditional, decidedly low-tech approach can be highly effective.

Windows with the shutters and curtains closed show up in the images in a deep blue colour, demonstrating little heat is escaping.

Windows with the shutters and curtains open burn bright, in oranges and reds, showing that much more heat and money is being wasted.

The team behind the project said other traditional techniques were valuable too, and anyone living in a period property should not overlook the importance of draught excluders.

Chiara Ronchini, energy efficiency officer for the trust, said: "We know that improving energy efficiency in historic buildings is very important if we're to reduce carbon emissions and alleviate fuel poverty.

"There are issues, of course, with historic buildings, but they are so well designed that they just need a little push to make sure that they are performing as well as the most modern buildings.

"The thermal imaging exercise really proved that very simple measures, like closing shutters at night or using full-length curtains, can have a dramatic effect and make a dramatic improvement on the amount of heat being lost through the windows."

Operations Manager Psychological Therapy Services

£38,042 – £45,202 plus Essential Car User Allowance of up to £1,239 per annum
37 hours per week • Based East Kent and Medway

KCA (UK) Psychological Therapy Providers (PTP) provide a wide range of high quality, innovative primary care mental health services which are ranked within the top 25% nationally. Combining clinical expertise, a wide range of high-quality provision and constantly improving effectiveness, our psychological therapy services have achieved significant growth including the award of major new contracts in Kent, Surrey and Havering in recent years.

Your role will be to lead the ongoing development of the service and to ensure that all contractual obligations are achieved across East Kent.
In addition to managing the teams working across the area, you will build strong professional relationships with commissioning bodies and partnership organisations. You will create a team-focused ethos within the service and support staff to promote sustained delivery improvements.

Whilst you do not need to be a qualified Psychological Therapist, you must bring an in-depth understanding of current psychological therapy practices. Knowledge and understanding of the Improving Access to Psychological Therapies (IAPT) initiative would be an advantage. Proven management experience ideally gained in a similar setting is essential, combined with a self-motivated approach, first-rate communication skills and the ability to influence thinking at all levels.

If you have the ambition to make this high-potential role your own, you will enjoy the real opportunity to make a major impact on our future.

CONTENDER: Chatham's Tom Dallas could fight for British title

Dallas catching the eye of boxing's big names

UNDEFEATED heavyweight Tom Dallas is attracting invitations from some of the world's top boxers ahead of a potential British title fight next year.

The 25-year-old has made a good start to his career since turning professional in 2008.

A victory inside three rounds against Paul Morris in October was his 12th successive win, nine of which have come via knockout.

The steady progress has seen the Chatham roofer break into Britain's top ten heavyweights.

Dallas has been training with David Price and John McDermott, ranked just below him nationally, but his reputation is beginning to catch the eye of bigger names.

Albert Sosnowski, who fought Vitali Klitschko for the WBC title in May, asked Dallas to train with him in Poland last month, while British number two Dereck Chisora extended an invitation to spar last week.

Other commitments prevented Dallas from taking up either offer, but Mark Roe, his manager, felt it demonstrated a growing reputation ahead of a critically important 2011.

"Tom is mentioned now because there are very experienced guys out there who want him," he said. "That will help his development."

"We will be looking closely at the [next] opponent for Tom because I feel next year will be very important to make headway for a British title. It may well come towards the end of the year."

Dallas' next outing is due to be in front of home fans in the rearranged fight night at Medway Park on February 4.

FOOTBALL

Change of mindset is paying dividends

HOW DOES a team which cannot win away for 18 months triumph twice on the road in four days?

Plenty of Gillingham fans may have pondered that question on the way home from watching the 2-1 victory at Barnet last week, which came hot on the heels of a 1-0 win at Oxford.

Injuries, bad luck, poor refereeing decisions and better opposition have all been used to explain the 34-game winless run, but the latest addition to the club's backroom staff believes differently.

Sports psychologist Ashley Lawrence was brought in following the side's humiliating FA Cup defeat to Dover last month. Since then the former Gills youth-team player has spoken to the squad twice a week and believes success is all in the mind.

"If you look through all the players in the division, ten per cent will be physically better and ten per cent not as good, so there are 80 per cent in the middle that are roughly the same," he said. "So what's the bit that lifts them above that? It's psychological, not about ability."

"One of the things I did with the players on the first day was on them thinking negatively. Any sort of negativity does reduce from your ability to perform at the highest level."

While the use of psychologists is common at the top level, it can still be met with some scepticism further down the pyramid.

Gills boss Andy Hessenthaler said: "I've got to say I don't take to it personally, as an individual I don't need that, but some players do like the one-to-one stuff."

"Ashley's come in and instilled a little bit of confidence and belief in the group."

Richards points to King's example during time out

FOOTBALL

■ BY DAVID PRITCHARD

THE END of Gillingham's injury crisis looks in sight as several key players edge ever closer to a return to the first-team.

The season has been blighted by an injury list which has at times stretched into double figures, but the treatment room is finally starting to clear.

Simon King, the longest absentee at 18 months, made his playing return in a specially arranged friendly against Dagenham & Redbridge on Friday.

The centre-back came through 50 minutes unscathed, alongside Danny Jackman.

King was expected to get another run-out for the reserves yesterday, alongside Garry Richards and Curtis Weston. Of the quartet only Jackman is likely to be in contention for Saturday's home game against Rotherham United, but the other three, plus Andy Barcham, should not be too far behind.

While King's long absence has been well documented, the unavailability of Richards, his centre-half partner, has also been keenly felt in the Gills' slow start to the season.

He was last seen being stretchered off in agony following a freak collision with teammate Alan Julian during a game at Millwall in April. It left the 24-year-old with fractures in his foot and serious ligament damage, ruling him out for the remainder of the season.

"The way it turned in the ground I was a bit worried about looking down and seeing the state of it," he said. "I had to ask the physio whether it was intact."

Richards was fortunate to avoid the need for surgery, but his desire to return in time for the start of this season exacerbated the problem. After making one brief appearance in pre-season it quickly became clear the injury had not completely healed.

He said: "Your heart rules your head a bit because you're so desperate to be in contention for the start of the season. Through my own eagerness I ended up refracturing a bone in my foot."

It has meant a tedious three months going through rehabilitation alongside King in the Priestfield treatment room.

Richards has found King's support invaluable during his time on the sidelines, which has changed his approach to training.

He said: "King's been a shining light because he knew I was in for the long haul and to be honest I've learned a lot from working with him."

"I've changed a lot of my training methods and do a lot more strength and conditioning work on my knees and ankles. It's something I'll do not just while I'm recovering, but throughout the rest of my career."

Sloppy Dynamos lose their spark as unbeaten run ends

KEVIN Parrish blasted his Invicta Dynamos side for an “absolutely disgraceful” performance as they slipped up away to Milton Keynes Thunder on Sunday.

The head coach had warned before the game of the strugglers’ capacity for an upset, but the Mos paid no heed as their ten-game streak without a defeat came to an end. Only a good performance from under-fire netminder Andrew Dickson prevented the home side from winning more comfortably.

Parrish was alarmed by the inept display from the defending league champions.

He said: “It was the worst performance I have ever seen coaching for eight years, absolutely disgraceful. They had no respect for themselves or the club, too many were individuals trying to win the game on their own.”

“The one good thing to come out of it was Andrew Dickson; he’s had a lot of bad press, but we gave him a chance and if it wasn’t for him we could’ve lost by five or six.”

“If guys are coming here as a stepping stone to another club I don’t want them.”

“The way I feel I would rather play the [second string] Mustangs if that’s the attitude we’re going to show up with. It’s always horrible to lose, but they didn’t even try.”

The Mos made the journey without two key players. Andy Smith was unable to add to his record points tally, ruled out with flu, while Tim Smith was caught out by the snow while visiting family in Sheffield.

■ BY YOURMEDWAY REPORTER

Milton Keynes Thunder 3 Invicta Dynamos 2

The Thunder, who were beaten 16-3 the last time the Mos visited, took the lead in the 15th-minute, but Daniel Borges quickly levelled. Normal service appeared to have been restored when Michael Timms put the Mos in front at the end of the first period – but it proved a false dawn.

The Thunder equalised in the second period and then claimed the only goal of the final frame to clinch victory.

Parrish said: “There were a few harsh words said afterwards. I didn’t pick out anyone in particular, but said anyone who didn’t agree with me can give me a ring this week and tell me they’re leaving.”

“Hopefully it’s one of those games you can look back on and we get a response this weekend. We owe it to the fans who spend their money coming to watch us.”

The Mos have a double header this weekend, visiting another potential banana skin in the form of bottom side Swindon Wildcats on Saturday.

Streatham Redskins, who drew 7-7 with the Mos on the opening day of the season, visit the Silver Blades Ice Rink on Sunday. Face-off is at 5.15pm.

Medway show little Mersea for depleted visitors in Vase win

Medway 38 Mersea Island 13

A STRONG second-half display against depleted opponents saw Medway safely book their place in the fourth round of the Senior Vase.

The home side ran in seven tries, but had to wait until after half-time to make their numerical advantage count against their determined visitors.

Freezing temperatures left the game in the balance almost up to kick-off.

The fact it went ahead may have come as a blow to Mersea Island, who had problems making the journey from Essex and had to begin with 13 players.

They were supplemented by one late arrival during the first-half, but never managed to get the full complement on the pitch.

Medway, who used the game to give several squad players a rare start, took the lead on eight minutes; Simon Green putting Rob Ellis in to score under the posts, converted by Glen Wadsworth.

Any hope the visitors would crumble quickly evaporated as they struck back to score a converted try and two penalties.

They looked set to take a surprise lead into the break, but Medway hit back with the final play of the half. Quick ball from a series of rucks found its way to Wadsworth to scamper over and he converted to give the hosts a 14-13 lead.

Medway finally made the numerical advantage count in the second-half, scoring five unanswered tries. Sam Garofalo, Tony Nolan (two) and a second from Wadsworth saw Taff Gwilliam’s side eventually coast into the next round.

The margin of victory would have been even greater, but Nolan was denied a hat-trick when he was unluckily adjudged to have knocked on when in fact he had kicked ahead.

Next up for Medway is a trip to Bromley, three places below them in the London 3 South East table, on Saturday.

FOOTBALL

Free match kicks off Lords’ big fundraiser

LORDSWOOD will use this weekend’s free game against Erith Town to launch a fundraising campaign for one of their players.

Midfielder Peter Huggens is running the London Marathon next April and has opted to raise money for two good causes.

The first is for the Guillain Barre Syndrome Support Group – after his partner suffered an attack of GBS, a little known disease affecting the nervous system.

The other is Cardiac Risk in the Young, a charity the club also supports following the death of chairman Ron Constantine’s grandson to an undiagnosed cardiac problem.

Representatives from both charities will be at the game on Saturday to help get the fundraising off to a good start.

The Lords will be hoping the game, which is free to all, beats the weather, unlike their scheduled trip to Corinthian on Saturday.

Big freeze is a 'thaw' point for Foley after cancellation

FOOTBALL

THE FREEZING weather got the better of Chatham Town on Saturday as their home game with Fleet Town was called off.

A frozen Maidstone Road pitch left no alternative on inspection, leaving the Chats with an unexpectedly free weekend.

It meant the Chats were unable to build on an encouraging display at Walton & Hersham a week earlier, although it did have a silver lining.

Joe Fuller was unavailable for the game and Ray Powell was suffering with a virus, while Gary Ward’s one-game suspension was carried into the Kent Senior Cup last night, if conditions allowed the tie to go ahead.

But it was of little consolation to Chats boss Paul Foley, who did not welcome a Saturday without football.

He said: “Postponements are always frustrating, no matter what the circumstance as you always want to play. We would have been forced to field a changed side, so it’s an opportunity missed for those lads that would have played, but the side would not have been any weaker for it as the squad has a similar standard of players throughout; although saying that we played very well with the three lads listed above in the away draw at Walton & Hersham.”

Log on to www.yourmedway.co.uk for details of last night’s trip to Ramsgate in the Kent Senior Cup.

This Saturday the Chats visit a Worthing side with a strong home record.

Ward, Fuller and Powell should all be available, while David Hunt and Kevin Watson are in contention after run-outs for the reserves.
